

Gender Fluid Flag

Name "genderfluid" applies to the persons with a flexible - fluctuating gender identity. Not identifying themselves as strictly male or female, they are considered a subgroup of genderqueer people, still they are considered distinctive enough to have a flag of their own. The genderfluid pride flag has five horizontal stripes. Their colors and meaning, starting from the top, are as follows:

- pink: represents femininity;
- white: represents the lack of gender;
- purple: represents a combination of masculinity and femininity;
- black: represents all other gender identities distinctive from strict femininity or masculinity;
- blue: represents masculinity.